JUSTICE BRIDGE

SIMPLE - SAFE - SECURE

AAC's innovative Justice Bridge is a simple video/audio communication tool for law enforcement, state prisons and the judiciary. The program improves courtroom safety and efficiency while providing potential advancements in parole and probation processes. Visits and hearings can be accomplished via teleconference. Results include improved communication between county officials and law enforcement; less travel for investigators interviewing inmates in distant facilities; and streamlined communication between judges and prosecutors.

FOR USE IN:

- Circuit & district courtrooms (above)
- County sheriffs' offices (middle right)
- Inmate box portals (bottom right)
- State prison facilities

BENEFITS OF JUSTICE BRIDGE

- Reduced employee time, fuel and vehicle maintenance cost to counties due to reduction in inmate transports to court hearings.
- Reduced liability to counties for vehicular accidents, inmate assaults and medical costs while the inmate is in custody.
- Reduced amount of contraband in prisons due to fewer transports.
- Reduced escape potential, resulting in increased public safety.

JUSTICE BRIDGE

SIMPLE - SAFE - SECURE

Summary: The Justice Bridge system has improved jail communications, judicial efficiency, and public safety in 26 counties, 16 state prisons and three Community Corrections facilities — all while saving money and manpower.

In 1986, the Association of Arkansas Counties (AAC) developed the AAC Risk Management Fund (RMF). Fifty-six counties participate in this self-funded, self-administered program. RMF is a fund through which counties acting cooperatively can manage their risk through good loss control practices and obtain protection without paying for unneeded protection.

The AAC continuously looks for ways to limit counties' liability and save them money. In partnership with Keystone, AAC is addressing inefficiencies in the transportation of prisoners between jail/prison and courtrooms. There is no need for a sheriff's deputy to drive four hours across the state for an inmate to spend 15 minutes in a courtroom. There also is no need for the Arkansas Department of Corrections (DOC) or the Arkansas Department of Community Corrections (ACC) to prepare an inmate for transport. Every time an inmate is transported, the liability for the county and the state increases — and public safety is jeopardized.

AAC believes technology can assist the counties and state in this endeavor. Certain counties have a video arraignment system that connects the jail and the courtroom. Using that principle, AAC has developed a statewide, secure network that includes correctional facilities.

The program is available only to RMF member counties. A high-tech jail phone is the cornerstone of this program.

The jail phone enclosure is a vandal-proof 18x18x8 enclosure is built by TWH Enterprises in Batesville. The 15-inch color screen features a shatterproof display, and the phone is powered by a small computer located inside the enclosure. Two locks on the door prevent unauthorized entry into the enclosure. The high-resolution camera is protected by Plexiglass to prevent lens damage. The phone can be either wall mounted with the data and power enclosed in conduit to prevent tampering, or it can be installed on a cart for mobility.

AAC has installed phones in 16 DOC prisons and in three ACC facilities at no cost to the state. Twenty-six counties are participating in the program, and another 14 counties are preparing
